Hey yall, it's me i'm back at it- at me aunt and uncle's house now in bRaHiL, couldn't post a lot bc the first few days are always intense but now I have some time so

Tsunami sniffed as she filled her mug with coffee. The house-elves in the Kitchens glanced at her, worried. "Cans we gets the Miss some medicine? Mister Smolder is always ready to provides us with medicine, Miss." one whose name she knew to be Pato asked.
Tsunami shook her head. "No thanks, just a little cold. Nothing Clay can't fix later. Did he drop off the poison, by the way?"
Pato nodded, looking at the others. "Vaca, go gets the poison Misters Clay left please."
Vaca hurried off, the scarf around her neck, which had been woven in vibrant neon pink colors, trailing off behind her. Tsunami smiled lightly. All house-elves and owners that came to Hogwarts were informed that the elf had the choice of any article of clothing at all, in any color and any pattern for their first piece of clothing. This led to some rather ridiculous choices, Tsunami thought as she observed the large life-size yellow wool duckling on Pato's hat. The house-elf also displayed two vibrant orange socks, which he'd bought with his wages, though Tsunami had no idea which shop would sell something like that.
Vaca returned, carrying the small vial with the poison. Tsunami lightly dripped a drop into her coffee then drank it all up. The strong coffee obscured the awkward taste of the poison, and though there were some stomach aches, they'd gotten weaker and easier to bear as she built up her resistance. She allowed her mind to drift, as it often did when she relaxed in the Kitchens during her down time. Leaning back into the chair, she wondered what ridiculous security measure Sunny would add to that Kinkajou girl next. Maybe they'll make her build up a poison resistance herself, she thought. Tsunami snorted at that idea, then made a mental note to avoid that topic around Sunny.
"Well, thanks for the coffee and poison. See you guys." Tsunami said, standing up and heading for the door.

The house-elves bowed at her, their way of waving goodbye. Tsunami let out an exasperated sigh and walked out into the seventh-floor corridor. Never able to find the hall with the formal kitchen entrance, she always merely poisoned herself, got a need for the antidote, summoned the Room of Requirement, walked into the Kitchens and saved herself. I drink a lot of poison, Tsunami thought, hurrying along to her room to continue her research project.
She'd briefly looked through Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them when Sunny had told her about Carnelian's recommendation, but after the girl's disappearance she'd put new effort into the search and was now halfway through Whom'st've Knocks In The Middleth of Yonder Dark Knight?: A Guide To Moste Deadlie Deathes, which was written by an unknown author with clearly horrible spelling. Thought she'd discovered far more than she ever wanted to know about Peeves the Poltergeist, she still had nothing on so-called 'Soul Fragments'.
Sitting down at her desk she plunged back into the ancient book, soaking up information until something caught her eye.

'Thise 'ere gripping Poletergheist's sound is nott made normally, like that of the centaure. It is't prowdueced by a sac located near their eyes. Likewisse, the poletergheist's hearing ist causated by a special organe. A clustere of soule located on the poletergheist's heade permits it hearing (Much like Soule Spirites, otherwise known as Soule Fragmentals, see page 165.)'

Tsunami gasped, quickly flipping the pages to 165. There she found an entrance on 'Soule Spirites', and began to read.

'The Soule broken ist a moste horrid of deeeds, only done by moste fearsome warlock. When accomplished, part of the soule lives on in oure worlde. The soule can be dangerous if taken from powerful sorcerers, but few are known to existe. These are able to be-'

And that was where the writing ended, because the rest of the page was torn out.
And on the page was a small stained dot of green.

"Kinkajou! Hey KinkaJOU!"
Kinkajou turned. Tsunami was running up the hall towards her. Professor Greatness, who'd been escorting Kinkajou to the library, gave her a worried look. Tsunami drew up beside them, out of breath.
"It's- fine-" she assured Greatness, "I just- have to talk to Kinkajou. Where are you escorting her?"
"I wanted to pick up Quidditch Through the Ages at the library." Kinkajou said, looking very concerned for Tsunami's mental health.
"Excellent- Greatness, do you have somewhere to go? Paperwork to fill out? Do you need paperwork? Oh, here's an idea, can you compose something for my class on how to defend themselves against the dangers of planetary allignments or something like that? Oh yeah that'll be great thanks, I'll need it tomorrow too."

Tsunami rushed.
Greatness, with a look of great alarm, instantly walked off as fast as she could without running. The instant she turned the corner and was out of sight, Tsunami grabbed Kinkajou's wrist and took off running.
Kinkajou stumbled, surprised, and tried to keep up. "Wha- Where are you taking me?"
"Hospital Wing," breathed Tsunami.
Whatever Kinkajou had been expecting, that wasn't it. "The- why?"
"We're paying Carnelian a visit. Hurry, or it might be too late."
They skidded down some stairs and stumbled in front of the door. Tsunami released Kinkajou and jumped for the handle, but suddenly there was a forceful invisible wave of energy and she was blasted back, hitting the wall. The door broke from its hinges, slamming into where Tsunami had been a mere second ago. Inside the Wing was Carnelian.
She was hovering midair, hair floating as if she were underwater. Her eyes, which had been closed for so long, now glew a bright red. Around her energy shimmered, condesing, forming into- something.
Tsunami held out her wand and bellowed- "Accio Necklace!"
Smolder was hurled out of the Hospital Wing by his necklace, landing next to Tsunami, panting heavily.
The energy around Carnelian was heavy now, forming- until it had a shape.
And that shape was a translucent red exoskeleton, with Carnelian hovering in its head.
And it was in the shape of a lion.

I promise this is the climax

Also happy new year's

Stay lit

"GO!" shouted Tsunami, grabbing Kinkajou and Smolder and shoving them away. "RUN!"
"Wha- Carnelian- but we can't just leave you!" spluttered Kinkajou.
"You've gotta," Tsunami said through gritted teeth. "Cave Inimicum."
The lion had been progressively getting bigger, but now it seemed to be in full form. Carnelian's eyes suddenly burst into light, long trails of energy rising up from their back corners. It sniffed at the ground and growled, then leaped forwards, striking at them. For a brief moment its paw was held as a force field burst into view, but then with a sound like glass shattering it broke apart. The lion jumped towards them, hitting the roof, causing part of it to cave in. Tsunami shoved Kinkajou and Smolder out of the way. Kinkajou turned, ready to help, but there was no way through the cave-in. They were blocked off.
"Come on!" Smolder grabbed Kinkajou's wrist and began to run.
When he took a turn that started leading them outside, Kinkajou pulled at his grip. "Wait- shouldn't we find Sunny?"
"The whole school's outside, it's the final Quidditch match of the season!"
"Oh." Kinkajou felt slightly ashamed at the fact that she hadn't gone to any of the matches so far.
They burst into the Entrance Hall and with a grand gesture of his wand Smolder made the doors burst open. "Accio Brooms!"
In the distance Kinkajou heard a loud thud as the Broom Shed broke open and two Cleansweeps came to hover before them. Without even checking on Kinkajou Smolder hopped on one and took off, zooming towards the pitch. As they grew nearer Kinkajou heard a boy named Pronghorn commentating.
"... Ravenclaw Chaser Splash with the Quaffle, passes to Smokeseer, Onyx tries for save, SCORE for Ravenclaw, it's 40-20 now Ravenclaw's in the lead, no sight of the Snitch yet, one hit me in the nose once, dunno how that happened- yes, Professor, of course I'm watching the match, but nothing important's hap- Er- yes, of course- uh, that makes Tualang with the Quaffle, dodges Smokeseer, passes it off to Heliconia- Heliconia throws, SCORE to Slytherin, this one time I got into this crazy accident with those two, involved a toaster and some detergent- right- Tunesmith hits the Bludger, flies to Ravenclaw Seeker Ermine- WHOAH, ERMINE KNOCKED OFF HER BROOM- CATCHES THE END OF IT, SHE'S FALLING SHE'S FALLING AND- WHA-"
Pronghorn seemed to lack the words to describe what Kinkajou witnessed as she zoomed towards Sunny in the stands- the Ravenclaw Seeker, Ermine, had just grabbed on to the end of her broom to stop herself falling but was gliding to the ground anyways when she lost grip with one hand, flailed it out, and scooped up the Snitch in her sleeve. The other members of the team flew to her, enveloping her in a hug.
Kinkajou barely managed to not run into the wood of the stands, she'd been staring at the match for too long. Smolder had got to Sunny before her and she watched her face fill with alarm before she stood. Sunny tapped her wand to her mouth and suddenly her voice boomed over the pitch.
"All students please get to the other side of the lake as fast as possible. I repeat, all students- is there anyone back at the castle? Glory, go get them- I'll-"
Her voice cut off then as a cry of panic rose in the crowd. Confused students began stumbling over each other to get away.

Was supposed to be dramatic climax

Turned into mostly quidditch???

sORRY YALL IT'S BEEN BUSY DOWN HERE IN GHOSTLAND

Spice

Then something severely unexpected happened- the windows to the castle shattered, and out of them darted three glowing- things. They looked like a mass of swirling color, one green, one blue, and one yellow. The blue and green stopped and began to glow brighter and brighter, until-
"WINTER! MOON!"
Kinkajou whirled around to see Qibli screaming the names of the two people who were now both levitating off the ground. One of Winter's eyes was glowing green, energy trailing out the back corner- much like Carnelian. The same was happening to Moon, except her eyes were glowing blue. Their respective energies began to swirl around them, slowly forming into animal-like shapes. Realizing what was happening, Kinkajou took a step back.
Carnelian's eyes were red, the red energy made a lion around her- Winter and Moon- they should become an eagle and a snake. But what about-?
A flashback returned to Kinkajou's head. Carnelian bursting into the hall, exhausted, eyes a strange, unfamiliar red, pointing at Kinkajou. You're next.
Did that mean-?
Kinkajou turned back towards the castle, just in time to see a whirl of yellow light that was hurtling towards her. Frozen with shock, she would've been hit if not for Newt, who tackled her aside.
"Come ON!" she shouted, dragging Kinkajou up and starting towards the top of the stands at a run, Qibli close behind.
Kinkajou glanced back at the panicked evacuators. No one seemed to have noticed them leaving.
She looked to the side at Newt's determined face, which was glaring at where Moon hovered, and eagle slowly forming around her.
A realization suddenly hit her. "You can't be serious! Newt it's-"
But she never got a chance to finish that sentence, as Moon leaped off the top of the stands, yanking Kinkajou along. She let go of her hand, wrapping her arms around the talons that had now formed. Kinkajou was barely able to hug Newt's legs and hang off her, and a sudden weight told her Qibli had imitated her move.
The blue whirling suddenly stopped. For a brief second the blue eagle hung midair, three people dangling off its claws. Then, with a sudden screech, it took off towards the castle, flying at unexpected speeds. Kinkajou felt her loosely tied tie come off, and she was barely able to hang on. Qibli slid down, now just managing to clutch her feet. Looking back through squinted eyes, she saw the glowing green Slytherin snake slither at extreme speeds towards the castle, almost as fast as they were going, with Winter at its head. The yellow was nowhere to be seen.

Then, suddenly, she was falling. The glowing exoskeleton eagle had disappeared, and the three of them were falling through a window into the castle, Moon ahead of them. Moon landed in a heap just in front of the three others, and they scrambled up, rushing towards her-
Too late.
A sudden fierce light illuminated the hall as Moon's eyes glew again, and the eagle formed, quickly this time. It just disintegrated to get through the window. Kinkajou realized. Screeching, the eagle, smaller this time to fit inside the hall, spread its wings and took off, gliding down the hall before taking a sharp turn to the left, going down the main stairwell to the entrance hall.
No communication was needed as Kinkajou, Newt, and Qibli sprinted down to the top of the staircase, gasping as they beheld the scene below.
Three animals.
Blue, green, red.
Lion, eagle, snake.
Circling each other, all hissing.
Then something hit Kinkajou from behind and there were four.

White-hot rage.
Cold fury".
Haughty bitterness.
Disappointed anger.
It swirled, they swirled, the world swirled.
Red, green, blue, yellow.
Helga lunged at Salazar, her thoughts echoing through her host's mind: 'You did this. You ruined, our school, our dream, our hope.'
Salazar hissed, sliding under her then coiling up, striking down. 'You were all weak. You couldn't do what we had to.'
Godric tackled Salazar, knocking him off Helga. 'I trusted you. You were my friend. You don't want to have me as otherwise.'
Rowena's talons seized Godric, dragging him into the air. 'None of you were enough. You let her escape, and you let him kill her. You let me die.'
The thoughts swirled, echoing through the hosts.
The Ykes gasped, history flooding through him. Emotions flooding through him, anger flooding through him.
But then, something broke through.
"WINTER!"
A voice.
How strange.
It split through the illusion, trying to drag him back.
"WINTER!"
A boy. Unusual. Who was he? What did he want?
"PETRIFICUS TOTALUS!"
Salazar's coils swirled back- but it wasn't directed at him. Winter watched the spell soar behind, hitting Godric. His host froze, Godric's muscles tightening. Salazar glanced at the boy. Fool. Such a spell couldn't hold Gryffindor for long.
"WINTER! pLEASE!"
Water. Tears. Winter frowned. Qibli- Qibli was crying. Why was he crying? Salazar hissed. He was weak. He must die. Winter shook his head. No. He didn't need to-
Pain.
Godric.
Red.
"NEWT! HELP- ALARTE ASCENDARI!"
Salazar was soaring, Winter was flying, spinning midair. Beneath him, Godric twisted, roaring at the boy and his friend. Rowena and Helga battled, viciously tearing at each other.

Salazar landed and whipped Godric in the face, sending him staggering away. He coiled, twisting around the boy, gripping him fiercely, rearing up, ready to strike-
"Winter."
He paused.
"Come back."

Sorry for that stop but I gtg now

Hey guys- sorry for so few updates recently, but first week back's been busy and I've had troubles sleeping too. I'll definitely update tomorrow though- either end to the climax or second-to-last part of the climax.

Won't be the end of first year tho, still have to wrap up and explain what happened. Yup, surprising as it seems I actually had an outline for first year when I started writing this. And I already have a sketch of second too.

Qibli was insane.
He had to be.
There was no way he could be anything else. Newt had literally just watched him be swept up by the ghost-soul-spirit whatever of a giant snake, and he'd just- 'Come back.' What was THAT supposed to mean?
Newt's eyes flickered around the scene, taking in anything she could use to help. Moon and Kinkajou fighting fiercely in the corner. Carnelian staggering around, regaining her balance. No sign of help arriving anytime soon.

Newt let out a deep sigh. Of course these people just get possessed, and then the one person who can help me tries bargaining with the giant evil snake, leaving ME to do all the work. Typical.
"Please, Winter, I know you're in there." Qibli's pleading faded to background noise as Newt took off at a sprint towards Carnelian. She was just getting back up- the strike seemed to have hit hard.
"WINGARDIUM LEVIOSA!"with a flick of her wand, Newt made a broken plank of wood begin to rise quickly in the air.
With a running jump, she leaped onto it then into the air- the plank had been all the boost she'd needed: landing on Carnelian's head, she quickly gripped her mane, holding on for dear life. Carnelian stood, roaring. She turned, snapping at whatever it was that was on her neck, but after deciding this quest futile turned instead to the raven and badger. Sprinting at them, Carnelian brought down a swipe at Moon's wing.
"NO! That's NOT what I'm on you to DO! Turn AROUND!"
Carnelian didn't listen. With an indignant caw, Moon sharply pecked her face. With a roar of displeasure, Carnelian bit in her general direction.
"You're useless," growled Newt.

Newt took a deep sigh. "Carnelian. LISTEN TO ME. WE NEED TO SAVE THE TWO IDIOTS WHO I'M FRIENDS WITH."
Carnelian shook her mane, roaring at Moon.
Newt frowned. How does this work in books? A key phrase, or an act- something to help her remember who she is. But- what? Her family? Her family's apocalypse planners- I mean- maybe...?
Carnelian reared up on her hind legs, swiping at Moon. Worth a shot.
"HIT THE GROUND!"
The real Carnelian- floating inside the lion's head-'s eyes widened. The lion instantly dropped, crouching on the ground. Newt grinned.
"TWELVE O' CLOCK!"
Carnelian spun to face Winter and Qibli. Moon, severely confused, did not take this opportunity as she was busy puzzling over what was happening.
"CHARGE!"
Carnelian took off at an all-out sprint towards Winter. He noticed too late- Carnelian leaped, flying over his head, and Newt slid off, falling onto Winter's head.
"WINTER. WE'RE YOUR FRIENDS. GET OUT OF IT."
Winter twisted his neck, trying to get at Newt, who was clinging to the slippery smooth scale texture.
Qibli let out a sob. "Winter- please. Get out. We need you. The school needs you. I don't know what's happening here, but if you don't control it I'll bludgeon you over the head with a bufallo."
This, at last, seemed to get a reaction out of him. Winter inside the snake's head curled up, clutching his head. For a brief moment the snake's form flickered.
Newt frowned. "Why- that's- that's really, really dumb. And wasn't even original."
The snake writhed as Winter's eye began to glow brighter.
Qibli gasped. "It's working- we- we can do this. Winter, you haughty idiot, come back before you mess up worse than usual."
A piercing screech cut the air. Newt winced, covering her ears. A tear ran down Qibli's cheek.
"Winter," he said softly, "Please. Come back. We don't need you, but it sure would be better to do this with you."
He gave a weak, sad smile.
In a bright flash of light Newt and Qibli were hurled away as the snake's form disappeared in light. Winter stood, hovering midair, surrounded by a writhing ball of light. His brightly flashing eye glew brighter and brighter-
"CONTAIN IT!"
Newt whirled around. There, at the top of the stairs, looking considerably battered, was Tsunami.
"YOU HAVE TO HELP HIM. THE PRESSURE OF IT- IT'LL KILL HIM."
Newt didn't know what she was going to do.
But she had to do something.
She leaped to her feet, sprinting towards Winter, Qibli hot on her heels. Carnelian staggered to her feet, and, spotting them, ran at them. Newt didn't slow down as Carnelian barreled towards her.
When she was nearly upon her, she seized Qibli's hand and pointed her wand at the sky. "ACCIO CHANDELIER!"
Holding onto the wand as tight as she could, Newt soared into the air, dragging Qibli along. Carnelian jumped into the air, trying to catch them to no avail. Newt glanced down at Winter as they shot above him, drawing closer to the chandelier. She gave a deep sigh.
"Sorry, friend."
With a final wince, she released her wand and fell, giving one last glance up as it smashed into the chain connecting the chandelier to the ceiling with a new burst of speed after its weight dropped. A small spark from a broken, fizzling lightbulb hit the exposed phoenix feather showing through the broken wood-
Newt turned away as a bright flash of energy signified both the wand and chandelier exploding. With the heat of the blast hitting their backs, Qibli and Newt hit the swirling light.
